Oregon—Frederic Stanley Dunn

Although a good part of a year has passed since the death of Professor Dunn, of the University of Oregon, it seems proper that some record of his work be made in this JOURNAL, of which he was for several years an Associate Editor and to which from time to time he made interesting contributions.

Frederic S. Dunn was born at Eugene, Oregon, August 5, 1872. He came of pioneer stock, his father being a prominent merchant of Eugene. After attending the schools of his native town he received the A.B. degree at the University of Oregon in 1892. He then spent several years in the East and attended Harvard University, receiving the A.B. degree in 1894. After some teaching experience he returned to Harvard and received the A.M. degree in 1902. His first work in teaching was at Willamette University, 1895-98. In the latter year he became Professor of Latin in the University of Oregon and retained that position for the rest of his life. He died January 7, 1937.

Professor Dunn was one of the best-known teachers on the Pacific Coast, as he was a member of all the important classical associations and seldom failed to attend the annual meetings. During the war he was able to gratify a long ambition of visiting Europe and was for a while attached to the military staff of the Italian army in Italy. His contributions to periodicals were numerous and varied, covering more than seventy titles. Nor was his scholarly activity confined to the classical field alone. He was a member of several fraternal organizations, his most extensive affiliation being with the Masonic Order. In the history of this society he did considerable research and with characteristic thoroughness exposed some of its extravagant claims to antiquity, at the same time expounding its most significant rites and ceremonies. His last great service to the cause of the classics consisted in his arrangement of the program of the American Classical League, which held its annual meeting in Portland, July 1, 1936. Though under the burden of ill health at the time, he carried out his task with energy and success. In spite of the general falling off in classical studies he never lost faith in the superiority of his chosen field of work. With his passing the classical forces have lost a valiant champion.

FREDERIC STANLEY DUNN

The cause of classical education suffered a severe loss in the death of Professor Frederic S. Dunn, at Eugene, Ore., on January 7, 1937, after an illness of three months. Born at Eugene on August 5, 1872, and graduated from the University of Oregon in 1892, he spent six years studying and teaching in the East and then returned to his home town and alma mater in 1898. From that time until his death he faithfully served the educational interests of his university, the Pacific Coast, and the nation. Members of the American Classical League will remember him most gratefully for his services as Chairman of the Program Committee for the Sixteenth Annual Meeting of the League held in Portland, Oregon, on July 1 and 2, 1936. Though by no means in good health at the time, he devoted untiring energy to the preparation and conducting of that meeting and considered it a privilege to do so, as is indicated by the closing sentence of a letter addressed last summer to the present writer: "Such an opportunity comes but once; I am cordially grateful that it was mine."—W. L. C.
